It's safe.

All confidential account information is protected from unauthorized access at all times. Each session requires a login with a personal user ID and password—the same way a participant accesses their account at work.

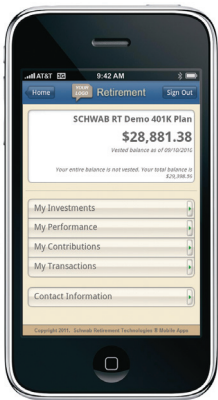

All communications are also protected by the Secure Sockets Layer (SSL) protocol. Account numbers are never displayed, and no private information is held on the phone after logout. As an added safeguard, the current session expires after 10 minutes of inactivity, automatically closing the session.

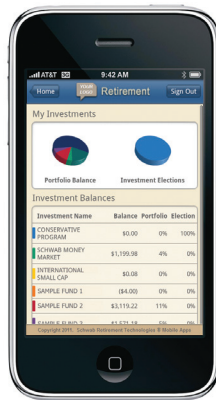

A personal user ID and password help protect account information from unauthorized access.

It's a way to give your clients more.
